Autumn 2025

We take pride in continuing to produce clean energy along the banks of Lake Echo in the Central Highlands

New Owners of the Wind Farm

We are excited to announce changes at the Wild Cattle Hill Wind Farm (WCHWF).

In December 2024, PowerChina (former 80% shareholder) and Goldwind Australia (former 20% shareholder) both sold their shares of the company to leading Australian owned renewable energy Independent Power Producer (IPP) called Atmos Renewables.

Over the coming months, Goldwind Australia will remain the responsible party for operations and site management, confirming Goldwind Australia's expert experience in the wind energy sector.

In 2025, our dedicated local staff continue working on site to secure the seamless transfer of ownership and asset management roles over to Atmos Renewables.

Atmos invests in green energy at all stages of the project lifecycle and is building out a scaled and diversified portfolio of generation and storage assets to provide clean power to a range of customers.

In doing so the company is committed to achieving positive environmental outcomes and lasting relationships with local communities.

Successful Community Fund Applications

We wish to thank everyone for applications received for the Round 4 of the Cattle Hill Wind Farm Community Fund. We had some amazing applications to show the local community vibrancy in the Central Highlands region.

There were 11 successful applications coming from school infrastructure to community sport clubs. Such a broad scope of applicants made the assessment process much easier for the community assessment panel to make their decision.

A total of over $180,000 will be funded to these community organisations, to support local projects and initiatives. This is the highest amount WCHWF has been able to allocate for community funding in this round. It shows the diverse projects in the community, from accessibility to the environment.

We are pleased to be part of such a creative and diverse community.

A beautiful display for the Waddamana Community Connections Space

The Waddamana Community Connections Space is a place for people to rest, gather and connect. It offers access to refreshments, a warm space and a friendly atmosphere on weekends, holidays and for special events throughout the year.

Long ago, this building was the place where Waddamana workers and families sought medical aid from the staff nurse and visiting doctors.

With the support of Wild Cattle Hill Community Fund, the Otto Family Partnership and the tireless work of a dedicated group of tradespeople, you can now sit out of the weather, have some refreshments from Earthly Delights Coffee and connect with locals and visitors in the amazing Heartlands of Tasmania.
